ABSTRACT

A method for designing a system includes determining minimum and maximum delay budgets for connections. Routing resources are selected for connections in response to the minimum and maximum delay budgets.